

WOMEN IN FILM WEDNESDAY

A BETTER MAN

Twenty years ago, Toronto-based Attiya Khan was in a physically abusive relationship with her then-boyfriend, Steve. Today, she's a prominent feminist who has worked for women's shelters across the U.S. and Canada. Khan has teamed with local filmmaker Lawrence Jackman to create a unique documentary that aims to evolve the conversation around domestic abuse. Steve agrees to appear on camera to discuss the violence he inflicted on Attiya and their troubled relationship. Among this year's Hot Docs Festival's most emotionally stunning films, A Better Man takes a brave and open-minded approach to processing trauma and healing.

A BETTER MAN

"I know Attiya Khan. She is an important ally to the everyday work on women's rights and safety. Her film is an emotionally courageous project that turns our understanding of violence against women on its head. It is the breakthrough we have been waiting for. Hold onto your seat and get ready to have your mind blown."

A BETTER MAN

"I worked with Attiya at a grassroots feminist organization that provided crisis counselling to survivors of domestic violence and it is no surprise that A Better Man leaves us with a multi-dimensional appreciation of human and community resilience. A Better Man will demonstrate the possibility of transformation. We will be challenged to explore the complex dynamics of domestic violence, and focus that understanding towards holistic healing."
